

RHESUS FACTOR
YOUR BLOOD INFORMED
BETTER THAN YOU

Logline

Alien civilization on the verge of extinction, their planet fades away, in search of an alternative form of life they find the Earth, where they decide to pass on their knowledge and experience, because the main thing in the universe is information life, but they face the problem: the human race is not yet developed enough, to assimilate the information received. They can risk, but the outcome is not known, or the human mind will withstand this test, or the planet will be in chaos.

Synopsis

In the distant 80's, an alien scout arrives on the ground for a local body. Since he is with a friendly and fairly naive planet, he immediately finds himself in an embarrassing situation, accidentally finding himself in a bar, he gets drunk with a new friend. Waking up in the morning in the forest, he discovers the loss of a valuable crystal, which is responsible for the integrity of the memories, and he is late for the ship. Thus, he remains on Earth, where he has to spend the rest of his life.

Here he reincarnates in a new body, now a woman. Which is inherently unusual for him, because there are no women on his planet, but he does not know about it yet, because he lost his memory. In this life in the new body, the protagonist leads an ordinary life and is fond of collecting minerals, and by pure chance this crystal again comes to his hands, and gradually the memories begin to return.

Later, he establishes a connection with his native planet, learns the disappointing news. They gather a team and send them to Earth with a mission. They need to urgently transfer their knowledge and experience to earthlings in order to prevent the loss of information, but they face the problem: the human race is not yet developed enough to absorb the information received. They can risk, but the outcome is not known, or the human mind will withstand this test, or the planet will be in chaos. In the process of accomplishing this mission, they get acquainted with a scientist who reveals an interesting fact for them: 15% of earthlings are carriers of negative Rh factor, the same as they themselves.
