

The 2017 Wichita, Kansas swatting was a swatting event called in by Los Angeles-based swatter Tyler Benson, a 25 year old male, on December 28. Benson called in the threat due to a disagreement over a $1,60 bet on the popular video game Call of Duty.

Andrew Finch, 28, was fatally shot inside his home by Wichita police, who arrived in response to a false call of a homicide and hostage situation taking place at that address. Police claimed that Finch was not the intended target of the swatting, and was not involved with the Call of Duty game match. Benson is held at Los Angeles County Jail without bail facing a felony charge of false alarm.^[7]

Contents [hide]
1 Background
2 Shooting
3 Aftermath
4 Parties involved
5 Legal proceedings
6 References

2017 Wichita, Kansas Swatting
Date	December 28, 2017
Location	Wichita, Kansas, United States
Setting	Revenge swatting due to disagreement in video game Call of Duty
Participants	Coony Vint (swatting master) Chase Swatill (gave address) Tyler Benson (called in SWAT) Wichita PD officer (first shot)
Casualties
Andrew Thomas Finch
casualties	1

S.W.A.T.T.I.N.G

When a professional gamer accidentally reveals information whilst streaming online for his fans, an series of pranks plotted against him begin to unravel with catastrophic consequences.

A story based on the death of Andrew Thomas Finch.
The first recorded death due to the prank known as swatting.

In the comfort of his own home, Jordan Gilbert known as n0thing is a professional gamer who is spending the night streaming his practice online for his fans. During the session he minimises to his desktop and begins to navigate through his desktop computer. He makes the vital mistake of revealing personal information in which one of his viewers uses against him to plot a series of pranks. At first the pranks are light, fun and harmless. Jordan actually enjoys the fact that every fast food service in the area are turning up at his doorstep with piles of food. But once the fire brigade arrive at his door of false claims of a burning house he releases how serious things have become. Meanwhile in Wichita police department they receive a call from an anonymous caller who claims to have shot his father, has his brother and mother hostage and threats to burn down his home. This same caller provides the police with Jordans home address. Jordans hears a loud bang at the door, as he jumps up to tend to the situation he rips the chord of the headphones from the jack causing the sound effects from the gun game to rattle the windows and fill the room. He runs to the door and answers to a team of Swat who unload on Jordan, leaving an innocent citizen dead.