

Tell me

Feature film

Theme: the relationships between children and parents.

Logline: Listen to your children, be close to them or you can lose them.

An approximate budget 1,0 mln $

Genre: Thriller, drama

90 min

- Rich family of middle aged husband and wife and 2 children-teenagers-twins (boy and girl). He is a successful prosecutor, his wife is the ideal housewife. Everything's shining in their house, everything's on its own place. They're busy and don't have time to pay attention and time to their children. They don't know their children what they want, think about, live with.

- His daughter had mysteriously disappeared and he needs to find her. He had some conflicts with her before. But he hadn't time to listen what she wanted to tell. He' sure that she couldn't run away. But then he understands that knows nothing about her, who're her friends, what she likes, watch, read. He has some versions. Maybe it's the revenge of the criminals accused by him, or maybe his daughter's taken as the hostage to put pressure in one of his current cases. Or maybe his daughter has run away by herself but he can't understand the reason.

- His son can't tell any concrete that could help or don't want to tell or afraid to. The father's afraid to call the police. He opens her laptop and starts to search the browser history. He's shocked by her requests and links: how to learn to shoot, how to make fraud, about criminals and so on. He's shocked by the videos on youtube that she'd watched. He understands that the only way to find out where she can be is to get into her social networks. She's logged-off from each of them. He spends some time trying to match the password to her accounts. We see the memorable flashbacks from her childhood when they were close to which other and the last attempt's successful (the password's the nickname of the first dog that he presented her). He checks her correspondence but finds out that she'd deleted most of dialogues. He looks her groups, her likes of other pages, and who put the likes and comments to her. He finds out that she's not the person he thought she was. Her interests are not lying in the fields he wanted.

- He finds several suspicious people who'd social connection with her, searches their pages trying to find something suspicious. He also writes from her names to her close girlfriends and their answers help him to understand that she's concerned last days by smth. Then he makes the calls as her father. He realizes that she's in big danger and he needs to find out the reason as soon as possible. But to save her he needs to make the real investigation of her social life.

Social networks

You Tube

vk

facebook

Thank you!!

